Uplifting Trance, often referred to as Epic Trance or Melodic Trance, is a subgenre of electronic dance music (EDM) that emerged in the 1990s. It's characterized by fast tempos (usually between 136 and 142 beats per minute), rolling basslines, and a melodic, anthemic sound. This genre encapsulates an emotion-laden musical journey, typically exhibiting a climactic, euphoria-inducing nature which sets it apart from other EDM genres.

Known for its extensive break-downs and build-ups, Uplifting Trance creates a sense of anticipation that leads to a drop, where the main melody or 'hook' of the song is introduced. This cycle creates a wave of high-energy moments followed by periods of calm and build-up, leading to a cathartic release, often described as 'uplifting'.

Renowned artists in this genre include Armin van Buuren, Aly & Fila, and Paul van Dyk. Their music has graced iconic trance events like A State of Trance and the Transmission Festival, solidifying Uplifting Trance's influence and popularity within the global EDM community. The genre continues to evolve, with newer artists blending in elements from other styles, creating unique sounds that continue to define and shape the genre.
