So hey, what are Construction Kits and Daw Templates?

Construction Kits are a package of loops that are typical of the same genre, same BPM, and are all compatible with each other, making them interchangeable. The sample track is an example of what is possible when utilizing the construction kit. It is then up to you how to shape, mold, and combine these sounds in order to make your own tracks.

DAW templates, also referred to as project files, are educational and analytical tools that are available for all levels of music producers. You get an insider view of everything that was used in order to create the example track. By using a DAW template, your set up is complete. Your drum kit is already there and mixed to perfection. Your synth pops up and has already been routed through effects and sounds pristine. From the moment you open the template, you will discover there is no guesswork. Everything will be clearly labeled and in most cases color coded.
